

43,527
participants*

Addressing health disparities through primary care workforce development and training

Promoting careers in primary care through pipeline (K-16), health profession student and adult programs

Providing clinical training

3,213
learners

including 341 Community-Based Experiential Training (CBET)

improves readiness, willingness, and ability of health professions trainees to serve in primary care, and rural and underserved community settings.

facilitated 551
rotations

- 203 medical students
- 64 nursing students
- 7 dental students
- 111 associated health profession students

385

Rotations in rural or underserved locations (subset of the above)

9,118

Web learners

(users of <http://HealthCareersinCT.com> and <http://CHWresourcesCT.org> and videos)

Training sites used include:

- 56 primary care setting
- 23 located in a medically underserved community
- 2 located in a rural area

Consumers or patients educated

29,576

Activities cover many topics including COVID-19, asthma; behavioral/mental health; diabetes; and oral health. In addition, this includes patient encounters focused on COVID-19 testing and vaccination as well as primary care and prevention at free, community-based clinics and health fairs.

116

Urban Service Track/ AHEC Scholars attending

6 health profession schools at 2 universities provided with a total of 8,304 interdisciplinary clinical and didactic training hours

953

continuing education participants

Continuing education programs address key issues in health professional shortage areas by providing health professionals with access to resources that support practice, reduce professional isolation, disseminate best practices, and improve quality of health care for medically underserved communities and health disparities populations.

