Janelle Mallett, M.D., M.B.A., is currently an Assistant Professor of Dermatology at the University of Connecticut School of Medicine. She received her bachelor's degree in biology from Harvard University. During undergrad, Dr. Mallett participated in the College Enrichment Program the summer of 1999 and the Summer Research Fellowship Program the summer of 2002. She received her combined degree in medicine and master's in business administration from the University of Connecticut School of Medicine and University of Connecticut class of 2007. Dr. Mallett graduated from the UConn Dermatology Residency Program in 2011, after serving as Chief Resident.

She specializes in General Medical Dermatology, Psoriasis, Eczema, Acne, Skin Cancer, and Alopecia. Dr. Mallett is Director of the Skin of Color Clinic and helped establish the UConn Alopecia Center of Excellence. She is a dermatology medical educator for medical students and residents, serves on the Dermatology Residency Selection Committee, publishes in major dermatology journals, and is a manuscript reviewer for the International Journal of Women's Dermatology, Pediatric Dermatology, and the Journal of the American Academy of Dermatology. In her free time, Dr. Mallett loves to spend time with her family and her two children. She is also an avid sports fan for the New York Knicks and the U.S. tennis and soccer teams. Dr. Mallett appreciates the impact of the HCOP programs on her own career and on the careers of others before and after her time at UConn.
